

For more information on the K2 collection,
please visit www.thek2collection.co.uk

Copyright © 2012 K2 Conservatories.
All rights reserved. No part of this document may be reproduced, amended or extracted.

K2 Conservatories is a division of Synseal Extrusions Ltd.

S/C: CUSCOLM MAY12

it's easy to be green

®
customise your conservatory with colour

considering adding a touch of colour?

but not sure if it's right for you?

When choosing a conservatory, colour is the one element easily over-looked. White often seems the obvious choice, closely followed by traditional woodgrain effects.

Advances in conservatory technology have however opened up a world of colour options, allowing you to perfectly tailor your conservatory to your tastes and your home.

You may wish to colour your conservatory frame to match existing painted window frames or house trim. Heritage homes in particular can benefit from the choice for a subtle cream to blend the conservatory in with existing styling - and that same cream used on a modern home can be a subtle but distinct statement.

Ultimately, whether your design requires a subtle cream or a bright orange, there's a colour option available to meet your needs.

I want to stand out from the crowd

You're not restrained to making a statement with your conservatory style and shape, adding colour creates something truly unique.

I'm creating a modern design

The addition of a black conservatory onto a modern house can give a dramatic look. This is particularly suitable for houses with existing black windows or white walls.

I need a fit for my heritage home

The use of a subtle cream woodgrain on older, period properties, can help to maintain the properties appearance and heritage, while still reflecting modern design sensibilities.

I don't want a sea of white PVC!

White interiors are not to everyone's taste, which is why we can offer interior trims colour matched to their exterior - or in an entirely different colour! The choice is yours.

I'm worried that colours will fade

It's natural to worry about the durability of your conservatory, as you will be enjoying it for many years to come.

This is why our powder-coated and foiled systems carry a 10 year

full warranty*

Giving you peace of mind that you are purchasing a quality, durable product.

*excludes selected high wear components